

Abstract

Ibrahim El-Attar

Use of progressive technologies in the educational process

abstract: within a perspective of rapid technological changes shifting market conditions, the education system is challenged with providing increased educational opportunities without increasing financial expenditures. many educational institutes have responded to this challenge by developing multiple learning programs, such as distance learning "dl", computer aided learning "cal", computer aided training "cat" computer based training "cbt". the success rather failure of these education programs will totally depend on the consistent integrated efforts of the learners, faculty, facilitators, support staff the administrations. the goal of this paper is to propose a rather more cost effective speedy solutions that will provide on line useful resources for maritime learnerstutors using advanced technologies through their educational process.