

Abstract

Hesham E Aly Elsayed

Abstract of the article titled "The Role of Maritime Law in the Protection of the Environment" published in the International Maritime Law Journal, Vol. 15, No. 2, 2011. The article discusses the legal framework governing maritime environmental protection, including the International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution from Ships (MARPOL) and the International Convention on the High Seas (UNCLOS). It also examines the role of the International Maritime Organization (IMO) in promoting and enforcing maritime environmental law.

The article discusses the legal framework governing maritime environmental protection, including the International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution from Ships (MARPOL) and the International Convention on the High Seas (UNCLOS). It also examines the role of the International Maritime Organization (IMO) in promoting and enforcing maritime environmental law. The article highlights the challenges of maritime environmental protection, such as the difficulty of monitoring and enforcing laws in the high seas, and the need for international cooperation and harmonization of laws. It also discusses the role of the International Maritime Organization (IMO) in promoting and enforcing maritime environmental law, and the need for further action to address the challenges of maritime environmental protection.

The article discusses the legal framework governing maritime environmental protection, including the International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution from Ships (MARPOL) and the International Convention on the High Seas (UNCLOS). It also examines the role of the International Maritime Organization (IMO) in promoting and enforcing maritime environmental law. The article highlights the challenges of maritime environmental protection, such as the difficulty of monitoring and enforcing laws in the high seas, and the need for international cooperation and harmonization of laws. It also discusses the role of the International Maritime Organization (IMO) in promoting and enforcing maritime environmental law, and the need for further action to address the challenges of maritime environmental protection.

The article discusses the legal framework governing maritime environmental protection, including the International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution from Ships (MARPOL) and the International Convention on the High Seas (UNCLOS). It also examines the role of the International Maritime Organization (IMO) in promoting and enforcing maritime environmental law. The article highlights the challenges of maritime environmental protection, such as the difficulty of monitoring and enforcing laws in the high seas, and the need for international cooperation and harmonization of laws. It also discusses the role of the International Maritime Organization (IMO) in promoting and enforcing maritime environmental law, and the need for further action to address the challenges of maritime environmental protection.